All the Year Round, All the Year Round,

I. In the three summer months (a) for children under eleven years of age in certain school yards; (b) for children and young people over eleven years of age in a playfield or playfields of not less than two acres each, either on property already owned by the city or pending the acquirement of adequate space, on certain streets reserved for play during certain hours.

II In the five spring and fall months.

It is estimated that the expenditure above outlined will enable the city to supply proper recreation for an aggregate attendance of 167,906 persons dur-ing the year. This estimate is based partly upon what has been aiready done in the city and upon what has been done in other cities. The num-ber of children who can thus be-reached will be from six to eight times reached by the presreached will be from six to eight times as many as those reached by the present appropriation. The proposed appropriation is three times as great as the present one, and the work suggested is at least six times as great, which means a net saving of at least one-half of the per capita cost of the recreation furnished.

The Finance Committee of the Council of Norfolk on October 16 recommended an expenditure of $7,500 on the supervision and equipment of five playgrounds centree in that city, none of the money to be used for chase or lease of grounds.

Want Louis Imm on Director,

Some minumberstanding has arisen, owing to the fact that the committee on recreation and playgrounds employed an cutside expert to make the recreation survey. It has been thought that the committee was also anxious to secure an outsider as recreation supervisor for Richmond. Such is not the case. The committee and the various other organizations co-operating a life them are muculy interested in gott as the best guestele leadership for the children and young people of the city Richmond is unusually fortunate in possessing among its residents two or three quits well equipped persons for the position of recreation supervisor.

Mr. Hayner's work was more that of an architect, and he was called in because he has made such recreation surveys to several of the large cities of the country, and the committee wished Richmond to have as good a survey as say other city. It is understord that no city of the sim of Richmond has so far had as complete and thereports a stay other city. It is understord that no city of the sim of Richmond has so far had as complete and
